

Why I Teach Drumming?

By Michael Burris

- Drumming is my sandbox – where time stands still as I creatively explore the beauty of music. I can't think of anything else I would rather be doing and enthusiastically teach!
- I enjoy finding simpler ways to study drumming and organizing them so that all ages and skill levels can more quickly experience the thrill of drumming.
- I've always been about inspiration, motivation, and passion – we all need them to move towards our dreams. I endeavor to pass this on to every student in every lesson!
- I want my life to be a positive influence for good to help make a difference in this world. I believe drum lessons help you focus to improve your concentration, stir your imagination and creativity, and adds great fun to your weekly routine.
